

SHELTERING IN SACRAMENTO COUNTY

What kind of shelter does the County provide to people experiencing homelessness?

1 SHELTERING

Emergency Shelter

Traditionally, emergency shelter for adults experiencing homelessness has been provided in congregate shelters. These shelters generally consist of large or semi-private spaces with bunk beds or cots where multiple people sleep.

The County has made investments in recent years to expand services at these sites and to reduce barriers, including provisions for pets, and mixed-gender populations.

The County currently funds two large congregate shelter programs – the Salvation Army Center of Hope and the North A Street Shelter.

Emergency Family Shelter

Family shelters consist of private or semi-private spaces, often that can be 'flexed' to accommodate very small or very large families where one family will shelter together, with shared spaces for dining, formal and informal gatherings, and youth activities.

The County currently funds two family shelter programs – the Bannon Street Family Shelter and the Next Move Family Shelter.

Families can register on the Emergency Family Shelter website at dhaservices.saccounty.net/efs.
